General J. H. Matthewson is in town. Table linens, towelings and towels at cost, at Harris Bros.

Mrs. E. L. Buckingham is in the city.

Miss Kate Hodgkinson returned from California yesterday.

Lake Tahoe trout are a very scarce article of diet in this city at present.

Consolidated Pacific has levied an assessment of twenty-five cents per share.

Henry Sharp, of the Ormsby House, and party returned from Hope Valley yesterday.

Sheriff Williams of Douglas county, went to Reno last evening with an insane patient named Stoy.

E. Strother, the Storey county gubernatorial candidate, was here yesterday looking at the situation.

Mrs. W. D. Mann, who accompanied her husband to Denver, has returned to San Francisco, being unable to stand the climate of that city.

Miss Hattie S. Sharp is now visiting friends at San Jose. She will be the guest of friends at Santa Cruz, Monterey, Sacramento and several other points before returning to Carson.

Any person knowing the present residence of James A. Wilkinson, or Leonard J. Whitney, formerly Lieutenants in the Nevada Cavalry, will confer a favor by informing the Adjutant General of the State Nevada.

George H. Marsh, the escaped convict, is 5 feet 7 inches high, weighs 158 pounds, gray eyes, light brown hair, small scar on forehead, scar on left eyebrow, four fingers on left hand scarred and crooked under, age about 22 years.

Ladies and misses' hosiery at cost, at Harris Bros.

Colorado Minerals.

The APPEAL is indebted to H. H. Tammam & Co., of Denver, for a collection of Colorado mineral specimens which will form a valuable addition to the APPEAL cabinet. It will almost double the cabinet. In spite of all efforts to hold on to these beautiful natural products about two dozen pieces were lugged off by fendish curiosity hunters (and baggers.) There is still left a number of agates cut and polished on one side, and those interested in such things are welcome to call.

N. B.—No more specimens parted with except to persons bigger and better armed than the staff.

The Difference

At many points in California five fine watermelons can be bought for a quarter of a dollar, while in Carson a little measly melon costs a half dollar. But, then, it is not the original cost of the goods, "but it is the freight," as the storekeeper told the miner when he charged twenty-five cents for a single cambric needle.

A SHIRTLESS MAN'S LUCK.

A Fresh Anecdote of Jim Keene

EDITOR APPEAL:—Your sketch on James Keene's turns on the wheel of fortune, concluding with a story of how he remembered an insult, reminds me of an anecdote related by a friend illustrating the gratitude, which is a strong characteristic of his vindictiveness.

A fogless, sunny day—an exception to the rule in San Francisco—found Keene standing in the office of P., the well known President of the "big" Board of Brokers, on California street, a lively thoroughfare then. Huddled about by nervous and perspiring clerks and messengers, he was conspicuous in a closely-buttoned ulster with its collar drawn up over his ears. To P.'s greeting and inquiry, "Are you sick, Jim?" Keene's only response was a husky clearing of his throat, which impressed the crowd that his was a very bad case of bronchitis.

"Got a sore throat, have you, Jim?" continued P. "You're bundled up."

"No, sir," said a low voice from the collar of the ulster, "I'm quite well and feel cool, though the day is warm."

In response to P.'s direct question, "What is the matter, Jim?" he drew closer and in a lower tone, replied, "I put my last white shirt in the wash this morning, and not having a clean one to put on, I have to button up pretty close to conceal my undershirt. I am broke; and that's not all; my family need my assistance," huskily continued the voice from the collar.

"Jim, here's five dollars. Buy a shirt, go home and put it on, cheer your wife up and then come here again," said kind-hearted P., resuming his business.

Upon Keene's return his friend said: "Is it as bad as you say, Jim?"

"Yes."

"Then take this and see what you can do," handing him $100.

After making a stake in stocks from this beginning, Keene one day entered the same office and laying $1,000 on P.'s desk, said:

"Is that enough to repay your kindness?"

"Not so fast, Jim. When you are able you may return the hundred dollars. Not one cent more," was P.'s firm response to all his entreaties.

Keene, the broker price, hastened to discharge his debt of money a few months later, but never seemed satisfied with lavishing "good points" and costly, though delicate gifts to his "friend in need," who is still living in San Francisco, one of the most respected as well as the oldest member of the Board of Brokers.

CONTRIBUTOR.

Jubilant.

The Canavan Democrats are jubilant over their prospective success at the coming primaries. They will send pledged delegates to the Convention. One of their number said to the APPEAL reporter that Canavan is certain to be nominated on the first ballot. This Democrat may be over-certain, but there is scarcely a doubt that he will not be the choice at the end. Canavan is a shrewd politician, and a hard worker who will not miss a single trick before and during the Convention. While, on the other hand, Adams relies altogether, or at least in a great degree, upon his friends and his personal popularity. Besides, he does not "throw up" much coin, which, after all, is a most potent factor in Democratic politics in Nevada.

Hope It May Be So.

A letter received here yesterday from a Virginia miner of twenty years standing, and who is now employed in one of the North-end mines, says that there is no doubt that we are on the eve of a big, booming market. The writer believes that a development will be shown up within the next ninety days if it is not already made, which will clearly demonstrate the fact that deep mining on the Comstock is not a failure. There are thousands in this State who will hope that this miner's prognostications may be verified.

An elegantly made and rich quartz vest chain, made to order for $87, nearly new, just the thing for a present to a friend, will be sold for $54, at Uncle Harris', 221 Kearny street, between Bush and Sutter, San Francisco.

The Cauldron Boiling.

The long desired wish that the political pot should begin to simmer is being realized in Carson at last. The absorbing topic, or rather the only subject that one can hear discussed in the parlor, office, store, saloon and on the street is politics. It is discussed even between man and wife while retiring at night and before they arise in the morning. The ardent lover who generally pours the sweetest taffy into his girl's pearly ear, refrains from his saccharine twaddle and now dwells only upon the prospects of his political preferences in the coming campaign. And when a subject reaches such a pitch of interest it can be imagined how all absorbing it must be. Before the election is over the people will have grown so tired of politics that they will be glad to let the subject rest for two years at least.

The Moonlight Party.

To mingle moonlight with beauty is one of the most seductive methods known by which wealth can be wrenched from the pockets of the godless. The "cheek of night" was only a terse way of alluding to the left side of a woman hit by the light of a three-quarter moon. How few of us are able to withstand this unmistakably strong combination, and in fact would any man like to be able to. On Thursday evening, August 31st, the Episcopal Church, taking advantage of the condition of the moon, will corral the available beauties of Carson "under one tent," so to speak, and invite the public to participate. Those interested in the movement will meet at Mrs. Charles Bray's house at 7:30 o'clock on Monday evening next.

A Business Like Indian.

The APPEAL is informed that last Winter a Washoe Indian in Alpine county, with the aid of several of his race, whom he paid and victualled, cut 300 cords of nut pine wood, clearing a profit of $400. It is said that he conducted his work in a thorough business like manner, and keeping a regular account of the cost of his venture. The coming Winter he intends to employ three times the force of last season. He says that when he has accumulated $2,000 he will send his two boys to some good boarding school in California and have them brought up the same as white boys. This Indian is a very sagacious fellow and has a keen appreciation of the comforts and advantages of higher civilization.

Got There Ahead of Him.

Yesterday afternoon Dorsey Noteware went to the pantry to get some grape jelly and on reaching out for a glass jumped back a couple of yards on discovering a big snake already in possession. The reptile was coiled around three of the glasses and having broken the paper cover of one of them was enjoying the stolen sweets. His banquet was brought to an end by a blow from a club, which also demolished one of the glasses. The varmin was a garter snake and measured two feet nine inches in length.

Raised Again.

Some months ago, owing to a threatened scarcity of funds, the salaries of the school teachers were slightly reduced. At the last meeting the Board of School Trustees resolved to raise them to the old figures, the state of the Treasury warranting the action. The advance was only $15, however. That is to say under the reduction the total amount paid to the teachers was $900. The next payment will be $915. Tax-payers need not growl at this, as it doesn't amount to two bits a year to anybody in the county.

No Foolishness.

Farmer Treadway, if he was ever in earnest in his life is so now respecting his trying to secure the gubernatorial nomination. He remarked to the APPEAL reporter that he is too old to learn new tricks, but he would endeavor to make the old ones tell in the Convention. He means to get the nomination if it is possible, and will lose no trick to gain his end.

He Means It.

C. E. Laughton expresses himself as being a sure enough candidate for Lieutenant Governor. He left for the Eastern part of the State on Tuesday evening on business and politics combined.

Exhibition of the Game Law.

One week from to-morrow the game law will cease to be in operation until the first of April next, and the true Carson sportsman who has killed no game out of season is making extensive preparations for the old day. The average Carson sportsman is no "slouch" and upon that occasion he will make the feathers of the winged creatures of the air fly. It is said that several members of the Carson rifle team, those who have grown somewhat egotistical about shooting matters by reason of being able to hit the bullseye nine times out of ten—are going on a deer hunt, and expect on their return to supply the whole country with venison and ornamental antlers. Before they come back, however, they will have ascertained that it is a much easier task to hit the center of a target than to bring down a deer running across the country at full speed. We would suggest, for the protection of their veracious reputations, that these rifle experts do not promise too many bunches of venison before their game is skinned.

The Fall Races.

With the turning of the Autumn leaves and the fallish tones of the winds come the sounds of the hoof beating the track and the crack of the jockey's whip on the course. Sweeney is on the way for a big turf meeting in October and will hang up some purses well worth running for. Under his management the Carson race track has come to the fore in good shape and the public like it as a resort. This year there will be a special programme of running and trotting races and any man who thinks his nag is faster than his neighbor's is at liberty to come in and see if his suspicions are correct.

TO THE PUBLIC.

PURE FRESH MILK

CAN BE BOUGHT OF

F. Ambrosetti,

DELIVERED MORNING AND EVENING.

THOSE WITH YOUNG CHILDREN

fresh, and delicate persons using milk, will do well to order one cow's milk of F. Ambrosetti. The cows are all healthy, and have clean water and sweet meadow upon which to feed. I do not feed my cows on manure or slops. I do not live in the neighborhood where the sewage water of the city goes. I do not sell my customers poor milk. My dairy premises are west from Carson, where the pure mountain water and wind-blown grass combine in the honest production of nature's most nourishing beverage.

25 Carson people can safely call on me for the pure article of milk at prices to suit the times. An examination of my premises and stock is desired. [sig.]
